

Berit Boshuizen graduated as an equine veterinarian from Utrecht University the Netherlands in 2012 and immediately started working at Wolvega Equine Clinic in Friesland, the Netherlands.

Since 2014 she has been working in Bodegraven Equine Clinic focussing on Internal medicine and Anesthesia.

In 2015 she will start a PhD project on genetic diseases in the Friesian horse and the development of diagnostic tools. In this 4 year project the genetic background of both aortic rupture and megaesophagus in the Friesian horse will be studied and genetic tests will be designed. Part of this PhD research is kindly funded by the Fenway Foundation.